Further Details:	Criminology is a continually growing subject area in the Social Science department. The department is very well resourced and occupies a suite of classrooms together with other Social Science subjects such as Psychology, Health and Social Care, Politics and Sociology. Criminology uses classrooms that have a mixture of traditional classroom settings and IT-rich rooms (including the use of dedicated Google Chromebooks). Teaching materials are shared within the subject which has a collaborative approach to the production of resources and all aspects of teaching, learning and assessment. The successful candidate will be knowledgeable about the Criminology Eduqas specification; they will be required to teach or be prepared to carry out CPD to be appropriately prepared. They should also enjoy working as part of a team and have enthusiasm and a commitment to student centred teaching, learning and assessment. The ability to contribute to new and challenging initiatives would also fit in with the dynamic and continually developing nature of the department and with the qualification reforms on the horizon the Head of Subject will also play a pivotal role in the next chapter for the subject working closely with the Head of Department reviewing new specifications and leading on the implementation with the teaching team. Candidates must be able to show a clear commitment to delivering quality teaching to inspire students of all abilities to reach their full potential.
